A reports that the schooner Fashion, at anchor in the Chattahoochees river, twenty-days "The news received here to-day is appalling indeed. the Chattahoocheee river, twenty-five miles above Apalachicola, was loading with cotton, and intended to run the blockade. She had received sixty bales of Sea Island cotton, and was awaiting for another arrival from ---, when a spy or some traitorous person conveyed the fact to the enemy's flee clockading. The result was that the enemy sent nice launches with armed men, captured the schooner with launches with armed men, captured the schooler with the cotton on board, and took her to the fleet. When the news reached Chattahoochee, Lieuteannt Guthrie, com-manding the Confederate States iron-clad gunboat Chat-tahoochee, ordered steam to be raised, and was determined to pass the obstructions in the river if possible, with a view of attacking the United States steamer and endeavor to relieve the Fashion. But the same gentleman reports that just as the steamer was leaving her anchorage her boilers exploded, and twelve persons were killed, while several others were badly scalded. As yet I am unable

the boiler, and the shell room as near. As soon as the explosion occurred a panic commenced, the men jumped overboard, fearing the explosion of the magazine and shell rooms. At this point the gunner, Mr. John A. Lovett, in the absence of the First Lieutenant, took charge and displayed great energy and courage is saving life and property, and in reasouring the panic stricken men.

The ship was found to be filling, when the poor wound ed and burned sufferers were landed, together with the personal effects of the crew and officers. It was raining and blowing very hard, and the bank was very muddy apong which the wounded were landed. The poor fel-lows lay writing and groaning in the mud for some time before they could be got to a cotton gin near by.

The ship was hauled in near the shore and has sunk to her deck, settling firmly on the bottom. The powder and chells are a total loss.

The guns have been landed and the nine inch and rife are already in position at a strong point, and although the loss of the vessel and the brave men is much to be deplored, yet with the guns ashore, manned by the splen didly drilled crew of the late Chattaboochee, the river i nuch safer than ever before.

To ray Profix of the Stata and Critical

The proclamation which I issued on the 17th inst., calling upon youze furnish six months' volunteers for the quota of millifar required of us by the government has not most with that prompt and practical response which I thought I had the right to expect. Whilst some, with a cheerful alacrity worthy of all praise, have offered themselves for the service, the number, I regret to say, has fallen far abort of what is required.

Some, assuming to be ready for any emergency which the defence of the State may require, hesitate to enlist in government service lest they may be ordered elsewhere; but the very proclamation of the President which makes this call upon us assumes as the true reason for it the threatened invasion of our State, and would seem to be an implied assurance that such force is only required within the borders. But suppose it were otherwise, and that it could be made available elsewhere, are we willing so to qualify and cramp the service that may be asked of us as to say that it shall be rendered within the confines of our State, but nowhere else? It may well be that the very best stand points for State defences are to be found on the other side of the Potomac.

Who are the men here in our midst to-day ready to meet the approaching foe? They come from the North and the East and the West. Volunteers representing six States now man the works upon Maryland Heights, and the citizens of the State, sheltered as they are under the very shadow of the capital, should be the last in the Union to hesitate over any service of a national character that may be required of them.

The Commanding General authorizes me to say that whilst he has accepted for special duty in the neighborhood of the Darricackes the profidered service of some of our patriotic citizens, such service will be no obstacle to the enlistment of those who would volunteer for six mosths; the first part of the still accepted and mu will be still accepted and mustered into the six months' service.

Some, as I am told, decline to volunteer, preferring a draft, because, as they say, only the loyal will volunteer, while the draft compels the rebel sympathizer to discharge his just share of the public duty. The duty to which we are now summoned is emphatically a patriotic one—one which we should be unwilling to share with any whose whole heart is not devoted to his country. Do you expect a heart service of this kind from seccessionists? Are you willing to leave the metropolis of the State undefended because they may fold their arms and offer no assistance? God forbid.

The patriots of the Revolution recognized no such reasoning. No whig failed to respond in those days because the tories stood aloof; but, when struggling for the liberties which it is now your duty to de end, they mustered to a man, and sought no said from the traitors in their midst, and left the very name of tory a term of contumely and scorn for all time to come.

Let me, then, once more appear to you, my fellow citizens, and remind you that the feet of the invader is once more upon the soil of Maryland in other days her citizens did not require to be twice told of such an event.
